Treasure of the Fool or the Queen of things—

Cicero, the greatest of Roman orators, declared memory to be the treasure of the fool. Sophocles, the great Athenian dramatist called memory the queen of things. Both of them were right. Cicero was referring to the inefficient memory, Sophocles to the efficient.

If you want to make your memory "the queen of things," here is the book for you, a book that will not only increase your memory efficiency, but also end your doubts and fears which are the outcome of a bad memory. It will show you the way to train and use your mind according to your requirements and thus inculcate a confidence in you which is necessary for a successful and happy life.

Fear, doubt, indecision and inferiority complex had always been the sworn enemies of mankind, and what this wonderful book promises is to help you overcome all these mortal enemies of yours in a way that it may undoubtedly lay the foundations of a well-trained mind.
