MR. LEWISHAM FALLS IN LOVE

"He watched her receding figure. His heart was beating with remarkable rapidity. How light, how living she seemed!" . . . . . Thus Mr. Lewisham had the first taste of love. He could not but be submissive to the overwhelming power of love.

By and by Mr. Lewisham had more and more of those sweet doses of love. For him it was the greatest of all things, better than flame, better than knowledge.

"He saw her out of the corner of his eye, and he turned away at once, pretending not to have seen her." . . . . . Such interludes made his whole being irradiate with emotion.

Yes, the net was already cast—Mr. Lewisham fell head over heels in love with Ethel. Yet, he did not know where love had landed him. Nevertheless "his love for Ethel became the sheet-anchor which awakened him to his obligations and responsibilities. . . . ."
