Tea isn't the only commodity pouring out of India.

Let most people abroad what India's Necessaries are, and the chances are they'll say tea. But it isn't the only commodity pouring out of the country.

Because when it comes to manufacturing cut and polished diamonds, this nation has few equals.

Indeed, the Indian diamond trade employs over 300,000 workers and provides one of the leading exports of this country.

Yet many other economies depend even more on the revenue this unique gem creates.

In Botswana, for example, diamond production provides over 73% of the Gross National Product. While in Zaire, the industry means valuable employment for over 30,000 people.

As you might imagine, with the livelihood of so many people at stake, a stable, orderly marketing system is vital.

Which is precisely why for nearly 30 years the Diamond Trading Company has been managing the flow of global diamond supply to demand, in order to offer this industry the support, stability and security it needs. Not just today, but also in the years to come.
