THE FOUNDATIONS OF MODERN PSYCHOLOGY SERIES

edited by RICHARD S. LAZARUS

University of California, Berkeley

Organized around key problem areas in psychology, the FOUNDATIONS OF MODERN PSYCHOLOGY Series offers a new approach to introductory psychology. The many volumes within the series cover every major area of psychological thought, research, and application. Each volume, written by an outstanding authority in the field, is problem oriented and introduces the reader to important psychological concepts as well as to the dynamic and ever-changing nature of psychology. As a whole, the series constitutes an integrated survey of modern psychology while offering the advantage of flexibility. Here are several titles of interest:

LEARNING, Sarnoff A. Mednick

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE CHILD,
Paul H. Mussen

TESTS AND MEASUREMENTS,
Leona E. Tyler

LANGUAGE AND THOUGHT,
John B. Carroll

EDUCATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY,
Donald Ross Green

MOTIVATION AND EMOTION,
Edward J. Murray

PHYSIOLOGICAL PSYCHOLOGY: FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES,

Also of interest . . .

THE EXCEPTIONAL INDIVIDUAL:
Psychological and Educational Aspects

by CHARLES W. TELFORD and JAMES M. SAWREY, San Jose State College

It is the authors' conviction that a dominantly cultural frame of reference should be used in dealing with the exceptional. When considering these persons as products of their cultures, emphasis is placed on the relative nature of their derivations and the degree to which these differences cut across all categories of exceptionality. Among these categories are included the highly creative, the culturally disadvantaged, and the intellectually borderline.
