

5. 40

*EVERYMAN, I will go with thee,
and be thy guide,
In thy most need to go by thy side*

CONTENTS OF VOL. II

BOOK IX—continued

CHAP.	PAGE
V. An apology for all heroes who have good stomachs, with a description of a battle of the amorous kind . . .	1
VI. A friendly conversation in the kitchen, which had a very common, though not very friendly, conclusion . . .	5
VII. Containing a fuller account of Mrs Waters, and by what means she came into that distressful situation from which she was rescued by Jones	10

BOOK X

IN WHICH THE HISTORY GOES FORWARD ABOUT TWELVE HOURS

I. Containing instructions very necessary to be perused by modern critics	15
II. Containing the arrival of an Irish gentleman, with very extraordinary adventures which ensued at the inn . . .	17
III. A dialogue between the landlady and Susan the chambermaid, proper to be read by all innkeepers and their servants; with the arrival, and affable behaviour of a beautiful young lady; which may teach persons of condition how they may acquire the love of the whole world	22
IV. Containing infallible nostrums for procuring universal disesteem and hatred	27
V. Shewing who the amiable lady, and her unamiable maid were	30
VI. Containing, among other things, the ingenuity of Partidge, the madness of Jones, and the folly of Fitzpatrick	35
VII. In which are concluded the adventures that happened at the inn at Upton	39
VIII. In which the history goes backward	42
IX. The escape of Sophia	46

BOOK XI

CONTAINING ABOUT THREE DAYS

CHAP.	PAGE
I. A crust for the critics	53
II. The adventures which Sophia met with after her leaving Upton	57
III. A very short chapter, in which, however, is a sun, a moon, a star, and an angel	63
IV. The history of Mrs Fitzpatrick	65
V. In which the history of Mrs Fitzpatrick is continued	70
VI. In which the mistake of the landlord throws Sophia into a dreadful consternation	75
VII. In which Mrs Fitzpatrick concludes her history	78
VIII. A dreadful alarm in the inn, with the arrival of an unexpected friend of Mrs Fitzpatrick	85
IX. The morning introduced in some pretty writing. A stage-coach. The civility of chambermaids. The heroic temper of Sophia. Her generosity. The return to it. The departure of the company, and their arrival at London; with some remarks for the use of travellers	91
X. Containing a hint or two concerning virtue, and a few more concerning suspicion	95

BOOK XII

CONTAINING THE SAME INDIVIDUAL TIME WITH THE FORMER

I. Shewing what is to be deemed plagiarism in a modern author, and what is to be considered as lawful prize	100
II. In which, though the squire doth not find his daughter, something is found which puts an end to his pursuit	102
III. The departure of Jones from Upton, with what passed between him and Partridge on the road	105
IV. The adventure of a beggar-man.	110
V. Containing more adventures which Mr Jones and his companion met on the road	114
VI. From which it may be inferred that the best things are liable to be misunderstood and misinterpreted	118

CHAP.	PAGE
VII. Containing a remark or two of our own, and many more of the good company assembled in the kitchen . . .	120
VIII. In which fortune seems to have been in a better humour with Jones than we have hitherto seen her . . .	125
IX. Containing little more than a few odd observations . . .	129
X. In which Mr Jones and Mr Dowling drink a bottle together	132
XI. The disasters which befel Jones on his departure for Coventry; with the sage remarks of Partridge . . .	137
XII. Relates that Mr Jones continued his journey, contrary to the advice of Partridge, with what happened on that occasion	140
XIII. A dialogue between Jones and Partridge	147
XIV. What happened to Mr Jones in his journey from St Albans	152

BOOK XIII

CONTAINING THE SPACE OF TWELVE DAYS

I. An invocation	156
II. What befel Mr Jones on his arrival in London	159
III. A project of Mrs Fitzpatrick, and her visit to Lady Bellaston	164
IV. Which consists of visiting	167
V. An adventure which happened to Mr Jones at his lodgings, with some account of a young gentleman who lodged there, and of the mistress of the house, and her two daughters	169
VI. What arrived while the company were at breakfast, with some hints concerning the government of daughters . . .	174
VII. Containing the whole humours of a masquerade	180
VIII. Containing a scene of distress, which will appear very extraordinary to most of our readers	185
IX. Which treats of matters of a very different kind from those in the preceding chapter	189
X. A chapter which, though short, may draw tears from some eyes	192
XI. In which the reader will be surprized	195
XII. In which the thirteenth book is concluded	201

BOOK XIV

CONTAINING TWO DAYS

CHAP.		PAGE
I.	An essay to prove that an author will write the better for having some knowledge of the subject on which he writes	204
II.	Containing letters and other matters which attend amours	207
III.	Containing various matters	212
IV.	Which we hope will be very attentively perused by young people of both sexes	216
V.	A short account of the history of Mrs Miller	219
VI.	Containing a scene which we doubt not will affect all our readers	223
VII.	The interview between Mr Jones and Mr Nightingale	228
VIII.	What passed between Jones and old Mr Nightingale; with the arrival of a person not yet mentioned in this history	232
IX.	Containing strange matters	239
X.	A short chapter, which concludes the book	242

BOOK XV

IN WHICH THE HISTORY ADVANCES ABOUT TWO DAYS

I.	Too short to need a preface	244
II.	In which is opened a very black design against Sophia	245
III.	A further explanation of the foregoing design	249
IV.	By which it will appear how dangerous an advocate a lady is when she applies her eloquence to an ill purpose	253
V.	Containing some matters which may affect, and others which may surprize, the reader	255
VI.	By what means the squire came to discover his daughter	261
VII.	In which various misfortunes befel poor Jones	265
VIII.	Short and sweet	271
IX.	Containing love-letters of several sorts	274
X.	Consisting partly of facts, and partly of observations upon them	279
XI.	Containing curious, but not unprecedented matter	283
XII.	A discovery made by Partridge	285

BOOK XVI

CONTAINING THE SPACE OF FIVE DAYS

CHAP.	PAGE
I. Of prologues	289
II. A whimsical adventure which befel the squire, with the distressed situation of Sophia	290
III. What happened to Sophia during her confinement	297
IV. In which Sophia is delivered from her confinement	300
V. In which Jones receives a letter from Sophia, and goes to a play with Mrs Miller and Partridge	305
VI. In which the history is obliged to look back	311
VII. In which Mr Western pays a visit to his sister, in company with Mr Blifil.	314
VIII. Schemes of Lady Bellaston for the ruin of Jones	316
IX. In which Jones pays a visit to Mrs Fitzpatrick	320
X. The consequence of the preceding visit	324

BOOK XVII

CONTAINING THREE DAYS

I. Containing a portion of introductory writing	328
II. The generous and grateful behaviour of Mrs Miller	329
III. The arrival of Mr Western, with some matters concerning the paternal authority	332
IV. An extraordinary scene between Sophia and her aunt	339
V. Mrs Miller and Mr Nightingale visit Jones in the prison	343
VI. In which Mrs Miller pays a visit to Sophia	347
VII. A pathetic scene between Mr Allworthy and Mrs Miller	350
VIII. Containing various matters	353
IX. What happened to Mr Jones in the prison	358

BOOK XVIII

CONTAINING ABOUT SIX DAYS

I. A farewell to the reader	364
II. Containing a very tragical incident	365

CHAP.		PAGE
III.	Allworthy visits old Nightingale; with a strange discovery that he made on that occasion	370
IV.	Containing two letters in very different stiles	374
V.	In which the history is continued	378
VI.	In which the history is farther continued	383
VII.	Continuation of the history	386
VIII.	Further continuation	391
IX.	A further continuation	398
X.	Wherein the history begins to draw towards a conclusion	405
XI.	The history draws nearer to a conclusion	410
XII.	Approaching still nearer to the end	416
XIII.	In which the history is concluded	422

